Discover Why You Should Attend the Summit:
Read the Captivating Abstracts Online!

Last month, we unveiled the final program for Destinations for All featuring over 130 speakers from around the world including world leaders and ambassadors in accessible tourism. If you have yet to be convinced to join us for the first-ever World Summit Destinations for All, we invite you to read the abstracts and discover the many reasons why you should attend! Already registered for the summit? Take a look at the abstracts to identify the sessions you’d like to participate in. Read the abstracts here.

Montreal... One of the Many Reasons to Attend!

Together with an educational and stimulating program, participating at the Summit also means you get to explore Montreal during its beautiful fall season. Located a walk away from the heart of downtown and Old Montreal, the Summit’s venue allows you to explore the host city and experience its cultural environment, cuisine and shops! View the bright colored leaves and breathe in the crisp air that make Montreal’s atmosphere inviting and warm. To register for the Summit, visit our
Taking part in our Montreal city tour in a comfortable accessible motor coach bus is a nice way to discover Montreal. Only a few days left to get on board! Deadline to sign up is Tuesday, October 14. Details on the website: www.destinationsforall2014.com

The German National Tourist Board Joins Destinations for All

The organizing committee of the World Summit Destinations for All has confirmed a partnership with the German National Tourist Board. The Board is the third major sponsor of the event, and will funnel support to the Culture theme represented at the Summit, joining Via Rail, sponsor of the Transportation theme, and Tourism Quebec, sponsor of the Tourism theme. Air Transport Accessibility: A Key Discussion at the Summit

Airbus, one of Europe’s leading aircraft manufacturers, will sponsor two workshops at the World Summit Destinations for all. The workshops will focus on airline accessibility, with a special highlight on Airbus’s own projects to make their aircrafts more accessible for passengers.

The International Civil Aviation Organization’s (ICAO) recommendations concerning concerning air transport accessibility, published in 2013, have rallied representatives from several international organizations. The report, published by law, constitutes an important step forward in making air travel more accessible for all customer segments. Making ICAO’s recommendations international standards for the industry at large will be the priority of several international organizations attending the World Summit Destinations for All, including the International Air Transport Association (IATA) and the Airports Council International (ACI).

Thank You to All Our Partners and Sponsors!
